As Ireland is forced to accept the Lisbon Treaty, the BNP say:

WE WANT OUR REFERENDUM

Blair promised it...
Cameron promised it...
We deserve the right to choose!

WE WANT our referendum! The Lisbon Treaty will give the European Union unprecedented power over every aspect of British life.

The Lisbon Treaty will effectively mark the emergence of Europe as a federal superstate. The right of self governance held by every member state will be a distant memory - confined to the history books.

Over hundreds of years, millions of brave British folk have given their liberty and their lives to make sure that this island nation remained free and under British rule.

The last time we were successfully invaded was in 1066. Since then we have repelled any attempt on our freedoms by foreign powers. Now our traitorous government conspires to give away all of those freedoms with the stroke of a pen. The BNP say: "let the public decide!"

Teacher Suspended Over Naked Pictures On Porn Site

A TEACHER at an all-boys grammar school has been suspended after naked pictures of him surfaced on a gay porn website.

Internet links to images of Sam Handley, 25, were spread around Harvey Grammar School in Folkestone, Kent.

Using the pseudonym 'Mike', the PE teacher posed naked in one picture sprawled on a bed with his legs apart, and in another he is captured resting against some furniture.

In a time when BNP teachers are persecuted for having being members of a legal registered political party with elected MEPs, we eagerly wait to see what punishment will be handed out to this individual.

Rotherham Council Seeks to Destroy Greenbelt

ROTHERHAM council has made plans to develop an area of open countryside for housing - when 25% of nearby council housing is 'under-occupied'.

Residents who live close to the land, known as Bassingthorpe Farm, said they had not been informed about the plans and claimed officers had tried to "sneak through" the proposals.

We all know that immigration and the immigrant baby boom are the principal causes being the need for new housing. The BNP would protect our precious countryside.

IRELAND SAID 'NO' THE EU SAID: 'WRONG ANSWER - TRY AGAIN'

IT IS hard to believe that within the living memory of their bitter and bloody struggle for independence from Britain, the people of Ireland could have been conned by big business money and liberal politicians into voting to be ruled by an unelected British president.

But that is the reality of the outcome of the second referendum in Ireland which agreed to ratify the Lisbon Treaty, and the likely elevation of Tony Blair to become the next EU President. In the first referendum the Irish people voted 'No' so they were told by their discredited politicians to go back and do it again.

The "yes vote" this time was the consequence of blackmail, deceit and lies. Not only did the European Union illegally intervene in the campaign using taxpayer's money to push for the treaty to be ratified, but the ruling elite simply lied to the Irish voters about the consequences of a 'no' vote.

They claimed the country faced bankruptcy without closer ties to Brussels when the real irony was that being in the European Union and being subjected to a uniform economic policy set by unelected bureaucrats, that was the cause of Ireland's economic problems.

Here in Britain, we have been denied a vote on the Lisbon Treaty by dishonestly and deception.

The vice president of the European Commission, Margot Wallström, has confirmed that the Lisbon Treaty is almost identical to the Constitutional Treaty which it was supposed to replace.

This admission was made in response to a question from my colleague Andrew Brons, the British National Party's MEP for Yorkshire and the Humber.

She admitted what we all knew, that the substance of the treaties were the same and only the names like 'High Representative' instead of 'Foreign Minister' and a few symbols had been changed.

The Constitutional Treaty was rejected by the electorates of France and the Netherlands and the United Kingdom was due to hold a referendum that would certainly have resulted in a similar result.

It is clear that the replacement of the Constitutional Treaty by the European Reform Treaty (the Lisbon Treaty) was carried out at the request of the British Government to enable it to renege on its pledge to hold a referendum.

This is trickery, dishonesty and spin is typical of New Labour and it has denied the British people the right to decide on their own future.

WHAT THE LISBON TREATY WOULD MEAN FOR BRITAIN

- ✱ The Lisbon Treaty creates sweeping EU powers over asylum, health, justice and social security.
- ✱ It will create an EU president, an EU foreign minister and an EU diplomatic service.
- ✱ The post of EU president creates the unprecedented situation where a single politician will represent Europe around the world. So far, each member state has taken it in turns to hold the EU presidency on a rotating basis.
- ✱ The Lisbon agreement will also establish a powerful new role of EU foreign 'High Representative' to act for Brussels on foreign policy and security issues.
- ✱ It also makes further restrictions on countries' abilities to veto EU proposals. The agreement scraps the national vetoes in new areas including criminal justice laws.
- ✱ It also makes British laws subservient to European courts through the provision that gives the EU a full legal status or "legal personality."
- ✱ Another important point glibly ignored by Mr Cameron is the fact that his party's European election manifesto called for the inclusion of Turkey into the EU.

CAMERON SET TO BREAK PROMISE

CONSERVATIVE Party leader David Cameron has refused to say if his party will hold a referendum on the Lisbon Treaty or not, despite his earlier solemn promises that he would.

Speaking on the BBC's Andrew Marr Show, the Conservative party leader refused to commit himself to holding a retrospective referendum on the Lisbon Treaty after leading members of his party dismissed the idea as nonsense.

Tory grandee and former UK Commissioner in Brussels, Sir Leon Brittan, was quoted in a newspaper as saying that it would be "ludicrous" to hold a referendum in Britain when all 27 member states had ratified the treaty.

"You cannot expect the others to untangle the whole treaty. It would be a great error for a new British government to get into this position."

20,000 BRITISH EX-SERVICEMEN IN JAIL OR ON PROBATION

THE NEGLECT of our ex-servicemen has been exposed as a total disgrace. It has been revealed that 20,000 of our heroes are in prison or on probation in England and Wales.

The shocking figures compiled by probation staff show that one in ten prisoners used to be in the armed forces - up by almost a third in five years.

The findings are solid proof that huge numbers of our soldiers who have risked their lives in Iraq and Afghanistan are facing severe problems when they return to Britain and attempt to fit into civilian life.

The National Association of Probation Officers (NAPO) described 'overwhelming evidence' that ex-servicemen do not get the specialist help they need, with thousands who suffer from post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) struggling as their family and work lives collapse.

A survey by NAPO estimated that 12,000 are under supervision of probation officers, with a further 8,500 behind bars in England and Wales. The total of more than 20,000 is more than twice the number of troops currently serving in Afghanistan.

A quarter of veterans report suffering from PTSD although many were not officially diagnosed.

Others report depression and behavioural problems. The figures show up the fact the Government is failing to uphold the principles of the Military Covenant by offering troops the best possible health and welfare support in recognition of the sacrifices they are called upon to make.

Psychologically damaged military veterans often struggle for years with crippling symptoms including flashbacks, nightmares, depression and anxiety attacks, mood swings and difficulties in relating to family and friends.

This is highlighted by the revealing fact that more British personnel who served in the Falklands conflict have since committed suicide than were killed in the war itself - around 270 compared to 255 combat deaths.

The British National Party calls for greater assistance for our heroes when they return home and move back into civilian life. Our policies are:

(i) An 18 month programme of support and mentoring designed to assist in the rehabilitation to civilian life.

(ii) Greater expenditure and resources for military service hospitals enabling them to provide the best level of care in the world.

(iii) A special tax band depending on service years along with an increased pension provision.

(iv) A one off allowance of £20,000 for those having served for at least five years.

These four simple policies would ensure that our troops would be able to adjust back to civilian life under the careful supervision of someone who cared and was there to give advice and guidance.

British National Party Launch Campaign to:

BRING OUR BOYS HOME

BRING OUR BOYS HOME

THE BRITISH National Party is launching a nationwide campaign this month to Bring Our Boys Home from Afghanistan.

This campaign will be spearheaded with a huge print run of our new 12 page glossy booklet pictured to the left.

The booklet outlines the history of the war in both Iraq and Afghanistan and documents the lies the Labour Government told to attempt to coerce the British public into supporting their war.

The real reasons behind the war are then exposed as the lid is lifted on the big business interests in the Middle East and how key US government officials have interests in those firms.

The new Afghan government is also exposed for what it is - a corrupt puppet of the US government which has already re-introduced many aspects of Sharia Law into Afghanistan and allowed the free flow of heroin out of the country.

This booklet is essential reading and will no doubt strike a chord with the vast majority of people who are sick of seeing British blood spilt for foreign interests.

THE VOICE OF FREEDOM

NEWSPAPER OF THE BRITISH NATIONAL PARTY

COMMENT

Editor - Mark Collett

Another month passes and there is another media storm about the BNP. This time over the BBC's treatment of the party. Myself and Joey Smith were interviewed for Radio One Newsbeat and the journalist treated us both with impartiality. This it seems has annoyed a number of people.

Now to make it very clear, the BBC did not 'go easy' on us, the BBC did not try to paint us in a glowing light, they merely gave us an impartial interview where we were allowed to put over our opinions - so why the fuss? After all, aren't journalists meant to present the facts as they find them? Aren't the 'free' press meant to present the facts so the public can decide for themselves?

BREAKING THE RULES

The answer is a resounding 'no'. The National Union of Journalists (NUJ) publishes 'guidelines' on how journalists should 'deal' with the BNP. Under these guidelines journalists are urged to report on the BNP in an unfavourable manner and to make sure that the journalist always seeks 'rebutting or opposing comments'.

The NUJ uses its control over journalists to twist the media and present things according to their liberal view of the world. The public is not allowed to view the facts and decide for themselves. The public must only hear what the NUJ and the liberal elite want them to hear.

DANGEROUS PRECEDENT

A dangerous precedent is set when a small number of self appointed do-gooders have the power to decide what opinions the public can and cannot be 'exposed' to. The media is there to present the facts and to let the public decide - not to manipulate the facts and lead an unwilling public down a road paved with lies.

It is like an echo from communist Russia where everything was vetted to make sure it was ready for public consumption. No opinion or thought can be broadcast unless it fits in with the multicultural status quo which has been imposed upon us. But the powers that be must keep up a pretence that there is a free press. Hence rather than simply banning the BNP, they twist what we say and misrepresent the facts we put forward.

ALL WE ASK FOR

The BNP does not ask for journalists to greet us with open arms. Nor do we ask journalists to agree with what we say, they have the freedom to make up their own minds. We simply ask for impartiality, for a fair crack of the whip. We ask to be allowed to simply present our views without the usual media spin - after all this is meant to be a democracy.

Unlike the liberal establishment we don't need to manipulate people's minds. We are confident in our beliefs and our arguments. This is why the establishment hate us so much, because they hate the truth, and they hate the fact that the BNP are the only party that will speak it.

DISABLED WIDOW, 71 CHARGED WITH ASSAULT

A DISABLED pensioner was hauled before the courts and charged with assault after she prodded a teenage 'hoodie' in the chest with her finger.

Renate Bowling, 71, confronted the 17-year-old youth in the street after stones were thrown at her home.

During the conversation the frail widow, who fled to Britain from Communist East Germany and walks with a steel frame, prodded the youth in the chest with her finger.

Police officers were called to the quiet residential street and the teenager told them he had been assaulted.

Mrs Bowling admitted a charge of assault when she appeared before magistrates in Blackpool.

Magistrates gave her a conditional discharge for six months and ordered her to pay £50 costs.

Afterwards the great-grandmother said anti-social youths were left to run riot while she was hauled into court.

She said: 'What justice is there? There are a group of youths who throw gravel at my window and use foul language against me.'

'I saw one of them throw the stones against my window from my bedroom. I went out and found him hiding behind a wall.'

I poked my finger out at him and told him what I thought of him. He called me "some *ing German woman".

'Then the police arrested me - I thought "What a joke. What is going on?"

'That lad had held my wrists and bruised them and he had the gall to call it self-defence.

'The police put me in the back of their van like a sack of spuds and took me to the station where they questioned me. Then a few days later I was told I was being prosecuted. I could not believe it, neither could my family.'

'I had to borrow £20 from a friend to pay the court costs as I only had £30 on me. It has all been a nightmare.'

Political Correctness gone mad! A pensioner, routinely abused by unruly youths who her pelted home with stones, finally cracks and confronts the yobs. Instead of the police and the courts standing behind her, they prosecute her for assault. It's time the law was on the side of victim, not the criminal.

THOUSANDS FEAR FOR THEIR JOBS AS LAND ROVER FACTORY IS SET TO CLOSE

A JAGUAR Land Rover factory is to close as thousands fear for their jobs.

The company announced yesterday that it is to shut down one of its two sites in the West Midlands.

They are the Land Rover factory in Solihull, which employs 5,000, and the Jaguar plant in Castle Bromwich, which employs 2,000.

Both are running at half capacity and production will be switched to the factory that remains open.

Bosses at Jaguar Land Rover, which is owned by Tata of India, said they had been forced to act in response to global economic collapse.

Elsewhere, Vauxhall has announced the loss of 1,300 jobs by 2011 at its plants in Merseyside and Luton.

There are strong fears that both sites could be closed within six years by owners Magna, the Canadian car part firm that has bought up the European arm of General Motors.

Tata bought Jaguar Land Rover from Ford for more than £1 billion last year. The company is controlled by entrepreneur Ratan Tata, who also owns Corus Steel and Tetley Tea.

A decision on which plant will be shut down will be made by next summer, with the closure happening within five years - to match the average life-cycle of a model range.

The Solihull factory has long been seen as the weakest link at Jaguar Land Rover.

It is especially at risk because its 308-acre site would make prime housing land which has for years been eyed by developers keen to build executive homes in the upmarket Birmingham borough.

Jaguar Land Rover said its plans set out 'decisive actions' and efficiency savings.

With the recession showing few signs of easing up, the last remnants of Britain's once proud industrial base are being dismantled piece by piece.

A nation cannot survive without the capacity to produce goods for itself. To rely wholly on foreign imports not only robs workers of their jobs, but also makes a nation dependent on foreign countries and foreign firms.

Successive governments, Tory and Labour alike, have been complicit in the destruction of our manufacturing base and are to blame for the this crushing recession.

Ban on MEPs in Parliament to Stop the BNP

ALL EURO MPs are now barred from the House of Commons in the wake of the British National Party's poll victories.

Nick Griffin and Andrew Brons were entitled to Westminster security passes after being elected to the European Parliament in June. But the pair and 70 other British MEPs have now lost that entitlement.

Harriet Harman tabled it in her role as Leader of the House because of "growing pressure on facilities". Her spokesman said the BNP was not singled out and added: "It is about all MEPs."

This is another clear example of how the Establishment moves the goal posts every time the BNP makes another electoral advance. Labour may have shut the door for now, but what will they do when we have elected MPs?

Nobel Peace Prize Awarded to Obama for What?

MEN AND WOMEN throughout the world who have worked hard, sometimes at great risk, in the cause of peace, now know that their devotion and sacrifices mean nothing in comparison to political correctness. That is the message from the committee that awarded President Obama the 2009 Nobel Peace Prize.

Obama to note has done virtually nothing in the cause of peace. He has been president for less than a year and in that short time he has already managed to commit more US troops to Afghanistan, 17,000 in fact, hardly the actions of a great peace maker. In fact he has merely followed in the footsteps of the previous Bush administration, an administration known for its warmongering attitude.

Nobel prizes were intended to reward, recognize and promote achievement - not serve as political or diplomatic statements. Sadly, members of the committee now in charge of the award no longer seem to understand that.

MUSLIM PRAYER ROOM BUILT IN MINISTRY OF EDUCATION DEPARTMENT OFFICES

YET ANOTHER sign of the accelerating Islamification of Britain has come with the news that a Muslim prayer room has been specially constructed in the Government offices housing the Department for Children, Schools and Families.

There is no "Christian prayer room" in the new offices, which cost £3 million to upgrade. There is only a "contemplation area" and the Muslim area.

The refurbishment of Mr Ball's offices have also included a massage room for him and his staff in case they get stiff spending the taxpayers' money, or possibly from pain caused by sitting at their Italian designer furniture.

Mr Balls might need a massage after gorging himself at one of two cafes specially built in the new offices, or perhaps if he bumps into the black granite surface tops in the kitchen areas.

Possibly Mr Balls might need massage after tripping on the grand staircase made from glass and surgical steel which cost several hundred thousand pounds.

The revelations around the luxury offices and the Muslim prayer room come the week after Mr Balls announced massive cutbacks in the Government's education budget which could see up to 3,000 teachers lose their jobs. Mark Wallace, of the TaxPayers' Alliance, was quoted in the media as saying that it was "appalling that with taxpayers struggling to make 1 ends meet, record national debt and children leaving school unable to read, these bureaucrats have been splashing our cash on luxury offices.

"The first things that need to be cut are the excessive perks and lavish furnishings for which ministers use our taxes."

Of more importance, however, is the fact that Mr Balls and his cronies specifically make plans for the Muslim area and not for any other specific religion.

This has to be one of the clearest indicators yet of the extent to which the Government is encouraging the colonisation of Britain by Islam.

The Conservative Party also studiously avoids discussing the invasion of this country by Islamic hordes and boasts several Muslims in its shadow cabinet.

Only the British National Party opposes the Islamification of Britain.

Manchester Schoolgirls Pressured to Fast for Mohammed

NON-MUSLIM girls at Whalley Range High School for Girls have been pressured into observing Ramadan by fasting.

According to the Manchester Evening News, around 30 non-Muslim pupils took part. They had to wake up to have breakfast by 5.00am and were not allowed to eat or drink until 7.30pm.

Tellingly, teachers also participated in the charade and all students and staff wore a '27' badge and will apparently be "awarded a certificate" for their self-abasement.

This was all done in the name of "cross-cultural understanding", "community cohesion" or some such vacuous nonsense.

Perhaps Muslim pupils at Whalley Range School for Girls intend to prove their commitment to "cross cultural understanding" and "community cohesion" by sitting down with their British classmates at the end of the Ramadan fast to enjoy a traditional English breakfast of bacon, sausage, egg and Manchester black pudding. Or maybe not.

CONSERVATIVES WANT EVEN MORE BRITISH BLOOD SPILLED IN AFGHANISTAN

The Conservative Party has formally committed itself to increasing the number of British troops in Afghanistan should it come to power at the next general election.

This shocking statement from Tory Shadow Defence Secretary Liam Fox was made at an International Institute for Strategic Studies (ISS) meeting in London.

A Conservative government would consider NATO requests for extra Afghanistan UK troops sympathetically," Mr Fox said.

"We would be prepared to send additional forces to accelerate the training of the Afghan security forces in order to enable them to take on responsibility for combating the Taliban," the Conservative Party frontbencher said.

He added that Afghanistan would be the military's "main effort" under a Conservative government and that he had assured General Stanley McChrystal, the US commander in the country, that the Tories would be prepared to send more British troops.

Directly contradicting a number of British military commanders, Mr Fox went on to say that the "war in Afghanistan is winnable" and that "Britain's commitment remains firm."

With over 9,000 troops stationed in some of the most violent parts of Afghanistan, Britain is America's biggest NATO ally there. Mr Fox went on to fantasise that "moderate" elements of the Taliban could be brought into a democratic Afghani government.

"If sections of the Taliban can be brought into the political fold in Afghanistan and allowed to express their grievances through a political process rather than through violence, then why shouldn't we support this?" he said.

Mr Fox's plans are identical to those currently being followed by the Labour government.

Prime Minister Gordon Brown has talked of a process of 'Afghanization,' in which NATO trains and prepares the Afghan army and police to handle security themselves, and Foreign Secretary David Miliband has said NATO should try to engage what he calls moderate parts of the Taliban.

"The goal of security is achievable," Mr Fox continued. "The current war in Afghanistan in that context is winnable. This is the - many of whom think any military action in Afghanistan is doomed from the outset," he said.

In other words, Mr Fox and the Conservative Party are not satisfied with the over 200 British deaths in Afghanistan and actively seek to increase the exposure of our troops in that country.

The BNP is the only party that has opposed the illegal foreign wars from the word go. A BNP government would not only immediately withdraw from this Afghanistan disaster but would also seek for war crimes charges to be pressed against the Tory and Labour politicians who created those wars in the first place.

COMING TO BRITAIN - OCCUPANTS OF THE 'JUNGLE' MIGRANT CAMP

THE SQUALID Calais refugee camp known as the Jungle was finally razed to the ground after hundreds of French riot police moved in and cleared out residents hoping to smuggle themselves into Britain.

Once empty, bulldozers and diggers then moved into the site and cleared away the tents where up to 1,500 migrants once slept.

But the migrants, most of them from Afghanistan and Iraq, sent out the defiant message: 'The only place we are going from here is Britain'.

A 22-year-old from Kabul, who gave his name as Rezna, spoke for many when he said: 'We're determined to stay as close to the port as possible because it's the way to England. Nothing will stop us getting there. We are all absolutely determined to start a new life in Britain.'

The British National Party are the only party with the resolve to stop the immigrant flood which threatens our way of life.

THOUSANDS MORE MUSLIM ASYLUM SEEKERS HEADED THIS WAY!

YORKSHIRE & THE HUMBER MEP ANDREW BRONS

I WAS delighted to be able to make my maiden speech in the European Parliament last month and it came during the debate on the result of the Irish referendum on the Lisbon Treaty.

For the record this is what I said: "Yesterday I asked Margot Wallström, the Vice President of the Commission, whether the Lisbon Treaty was essentially the same as the Constitutional Treaty that it replaced.

"She said that the changes were those required by the British Government and they involved changes in names and symbols. She did not use the word 'only' but you might think that that is what was implied.

"The Constitutional Treaty had already been rejected by the electorates of France and the Netherlands and the United Kingdom was due to hold a referendum that would certainly have resulted in a rejection.

"It is clear that the replacement of the Constitutional Treaty by the European Reform Treaty (or Lisbon Treaty) was carried out at the request of the British Government to enable it to renege on its pledge to hold a referendum.

"The substance of the Treaty would remain the same but the names and the symbols would be changed as part of a thoroughly dishonest claim that the treaties were different and that a referendum would not therefore be necessary.

"How can anybody dare to call this trickery and dishonesty democratic?"

It has been a busy month with sessions both in Brussels and in Strasbourg. I have been able to raise a number of points at my committee meetings and was especially pleased to make a contribution to a question and answer session on terrorism during a meeting of the Human Rights, Justice & Home Affairs Committee of the European Parliament.

Speaker after speaker were falling over themselves to emphasise that Islamic terrorism was not the only threat but one of many faced by democratic nations.

I told Gilles de Kerchove, the European Union's Counter Terrorism Co-ordinator, who was answering the questions:

"I am mindful of the fact that Islamic terrorism is not the only form of terrorism. However, when addressing the question of Islamic terrorism, to what extent do aggressive wars against Muslim countries - Iraq in the past and perhaps Iran in the future - contribute to an atmosphere in which terrorism can thrive?"

Of course the committees and European Parliament form only part of my MEP job description and it is the work in the constituency that I find most rewarding. I in Hull recently met with one of my constituents from Hull who has invented a fish trap that could help to propel the fishing industry towards ecologically sound fishing.

The trap causes no damage to the seabed and prevents the waste of more established fishing methods that involve catching the wrong kinds of sea creatures which are then thrown back, in many cases already dead, into the sea. The device also facilitates a highly fuel-efficient form of fishing.

The invention has my full support because the widespread use of such equipment could revolutionise the fishing industry and lead to a method of fishing that is much in tune with the local environment.

My constituency office manager, Chris Beverley and I have held a number of surgeries across the region including an open air one in the centre of Richmond.

We attempted to book a room in a local council office but Richmondshire District Council were unhelpful so we set up a stall in the town centre.

In fact this was far more visible than a traditional indoor surgery would have been, which, combined with the beautiful weather on the day meant that it was a successful visit.

It was a pleasure to spend the day in this lovely corner of my constituency and I enjoyed meeting a number of local people in the town and discuss a wide variety of issues that people would like to see addressing.

WHERE WE STAND

CRIME: A crack-down on crime with many more 'Bobbies on the Beat'. Much tougher treatment of criminals, including the return of capital punishment for child killers and terrorists. Zero tolerance for drug-dealers and violent thugs.

IMMIGRATION: An end to immigration and bogus asylum seekers flooding Britain. Use the £billions wasted in foreign aid to fund 'Homeward Bound' schemes to encourage immigrants to return to their land of ethnic origin.

INDUSTRY: British ownership and control of British industry and resources, including the mass media. Protection of British jobs and industry by selective exclusion of foreign manufactured goods from the British market.

HEALTH: We will use the vast sums of money now wasted on funding our membership of the European Union for the restoration of an effective national health service and proactive measures to produce a healthier population in the first place.

EUROPEAN UNION: British withdrawal from the European Union to restore Britain's freedom. We will trade with Europe where it benefits Britain, but want no political ties or monetary union.

EDUCATION: A return to traditional methods of education, with stronger discipline in the classroom and an end to 'trendy' teaching methods which have failed our children so badly.

ENVIRONMENT: A healthy environment for a healthy people - the protection of our countryside. A ban on greenfield-site house building except in exceptional cases of genuine local need, an end to field trials of GM crops, and the restoration of our 200 mile fishing limit.

FAIR PLAY FOR ENGLAND: The setting up of an English Parliament to give England the same right of self-determination within the United Kingdom as enjoyed by Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland.

GOVERNMENT & COMMUNITY: The establishment of a government that puts British interests first. A return to healthy moral values and policies aimed at strengthening the family and community. Tough penalties for corruption in public life.

FREEDOM: An major expansion of freedom and democracy to roll back the erosion of our traditional freedoms and truly reflect the wishes of the people. The introduction of referenda and direct democracy.

DEFENCE: An alternative defence strategy based on the principle of armed neutrality. No British blood should be shed in conflicts which do not involve British interests. The restoration of the County Regiment system and the reversal of defence cuts which have weakened our Forces and cost jobs.

REMEMBER! It doesn't matter if you don't agree with us on every last policy. Like all the other democratic political parties, the British National Party includes some members who disagree with one or two policies. Just ask yourself whether you agree with more of our policies than those of Labour, the Tories and the Lib-Dems. Most people do, which is why we are the fastest growing political party in Britain today.

Jobless Total to Top Three Million

UNEMPLOYMENT is still on course to soar above three million experts have warned.

Official data showed unemployment rising to 2.47 million in the three months to August, an increase of 88,000 on the quarter to May.

But worse lies ahead for the UK job market with public sector cuts and rising youth unemployment looming, said analysts.

School leavers and newly-qualified students are set to enter the worst jobs market in a generation, said Howard Archer of IHS Global Insight.

The number of people claiming jobseeker's allowance in September increased by 20,800.

Successive Tory and Labour governments have set the stage for this recession - it's time the public made some MPs unemployed!

CHRISTIANS CHARGED OVER DEBATE WITH MUSLIMS

BRITAIN'S plunge into a fully fledged Islamic state has been underlined again with the news that a Christian couple has been criminally charged for arguing over religion with Muslims in their own private premises.

Media reports have revealed that Ben and Sharon Vogelenzang, hotel owners in Liverpool, have been charged under public order laws with using "threatening, abusive or insulting words" that were, "religiously aggravated."

Apparently the Christian couple got into a discussion with Muslim residents of their hotel over religion.

During the course of the discussion, it is alleged that Mr and Mrs Vogelenzang suggested that Mohammed, the founder of Islam, was a warlord and that the burka was a form of bondage.

One of the Muslims in the conversation then ran off to the police and complained that she had been offended by these comments, leading to the arrest and charges against the Christians.

This is an act which would only be possible in a theocratic state and is highly reminiscent of Saudi Arabia and other sharia law countries where any sort of criticism is a criminal offence.

The Christians, whose trial has been set for December, face a fine of up to £5,000 and a criminal record if they are convicted.

They deny that their comments were threatening and argue that they had every right to defend and explain their beliefs.

According to media reports, Mrs Vogelenzang said: "Nothing like this has happened to us before. We are completely shocked."

She and her husband were arrested and charged under 5) of Section 5 of the Public Order Act 1986 and Section 31 (1) (c) and (5) of the Crime and Disorder Act 1998.

The Christians appeared at Liverpool Magistrates Court on Friday to hear the date of their trial before magistrates, and were granted bail on the condition that they did not approach any of the witnesses expected to appear.

The heavy-handed police action has once again highlighted the state's subservience to the Islamification process.

The Public Order Act was designed to deal with violence and threatening behaviour in the streets and not to regulate conversations between individuals in private premises.

The Christian Institute has come out in support of the persecuted couple. CI spokesman Mike Judge was quoted as saying that "important issues of religious liberty are at stake."

"In recent years, we have backed several cases where Christians have suffered unfair treatment because of their faith," he said.

"We have detected a worrying tendency for public bodies to misapply the law in a way that seems to sideline Christianity more than other faiths."

MEP Commemorative Cards

The MEP's Commemorative Cards are a limited edition but you can still get your two cards, personalised with your name, by sending a cheque for £4.50, made payable to English Fair Fund, to The Secretary, PO Box 107, Wigton, Cumbria CA7 0YA. Please make sure the name to go on the card is printed clearly.

BRITISH PEOPLE PUT LAST: 54% INCREASE IN SOCIAL HOUSING FOR IMMIGRANTS

NEW FIGURES have shown that the number of UK-born tenants in social housing over the last ten years has fallen by about 1.2 million while non UK-born tenants have increased by 300,000.

The Migrationwatch figures were unveiled by that organisation's chairman, Sir Andrew Green, during a speech at the annual conference of the National Housing Federation in London last week.

Sir Andrew said the figures showed that the proportion of foreign born beneficiaries of social housing had increased over the period in question from 7.2 percent to 11.1 percent — an increase of 54 percent.

"Migrants who arrived here in the last five years and are not refugees are not yet eligible to apply for social housing but could become so in future years if they are granted settlement," Sir Andrew said.

"Grants of settlement for non-EEA nationals are running at about 160,000 a year, giving a potential pool of 800,000 although, of course, by no means all will apply.

Figures quoted by Sir Andrew showed that the number of social housing units in England had fallen from 4.4 to 3.9 million in the last ten years, but that immigration has added nearly three million to the population of the UK over the same period. England has borne the brunt of the population growth.

"The waiting list for social housing in England has risen by 80 percent in the six years from 2002 to 2008," he continued. "This is up to 1.8 million, with a sharp peak in 2003-4. Recent research by the National Housing Federation, published in March, suggests that the waiting list could approach two million in 2011," Sir Andrew said. Earlier this month the Government announced plans to build 2,000 homes in England in a move which it described as the biggest social housing building project in England for "over 20 years."

"This would be enough to meet the projected household formation of new immigrants for just over a week," Sir Andrew said, adding that the pressure on social housing was set to continue because of a of

number of factors:

– The population of the UK is growing rapidly. It is twice as fast as in the 1990s and three times as fast as in the 1980s. At this rate it will exceed 70 million by the year 2028.

– Seventy percent of this increase is due to immigration. In other words, unless it is controlled, immigration will add the equivalent of seven cities the size of Birmingham over the next 20 years.

– Immigration is the major factor in household formation. Forty percent, or on average, nearly 2,000 new households a week are being created through immigration alone.

"Unless immigration is brought under control, we will need to build one home every six minutes for new immigrants for the next 25 years," Sir Andrew said.

"In the debate about housing, immigration is a huge elephant in the room. Pressures on the green belt, the need for more affordable housing, overcrowding - all of these are made worse by large-scale, uncontrolled immigration. We are sitting on top of a population time bomb," he concluded.

Chaplain Calls for Volunteers to Visit Sex Offenders

A PRISON chaplain has sparked outrage by making an impassioned plea for members of the public to visit 500 lonely sex offenders.

Reverend Anne Hedges wants locals to engage with convicted paedophiles and rapists at the new HMP Bure prison as 'they do not get many visits from family and friends'.

The category C facility, which has been built on a former RAF base near Coltishall, Norfolk and is due to open in November, is one of three new UK prisons that will deal solely with sex offenders.

A Category C sex offender is deemed a prisoner who cannot be trusted in open conditions.

She said on her website: 'These prisoners are still people and despite the crimes they have committed, it is not our place to judge them.'

This is another striking example of how Britain's clergy are now out of touch with the thoughts and feelings of ordinary members of the public.

Criminals are put in prison as a punishment and as a deterrent to others who might commit crime. The sex offenders in this prison do not deserve any breaks and our sympathies should be with their victims and their families.

ROYAL MAIL CRISIS AS PROFIT REPLACES SERVICE

ROYAL MAIL is facing one of its biggest crises yet as profit-driven management seek to slash costs at the expense of service levels and ordinary frontline staff, a BNP News investigation has revealed.

Millions of letters and parcels, particularly in the London area, have heaped up as a result of a series of postal strikes and industrial actions over the past several months, causing considerable anguish to mail users and post office staff alike.

The media and Royal Mail management consistently refuse to address the real cause of the dispute, which is the fact that Royal Mail's budget gets cut by about 10 percent every year, which forces each office to make cuts or savings of that figure each year as well.

The reason for the cuts has been the so-called privatisation drive first mooted by the Conservative s

Party and endorsed by the Labour Party. The Government expressed its desire as late as last year to privatise the post office and only backed down because of threats from the trade unions which fund that party.

To make RM "acceptable" for privatisation means making it profitable. There is, however, an important problem in this regard. Royal Mail works under what is known as the "Universal Service Obligation."

This means that Royal Mail's charter obliges it to collect and deliver mail anywhere in Britain for the same price.

It is obvious that this service could only be profitable in major centres where mail volumes are of such a nature that it is viable. The cost of delivering a letter to the Hebrides, for example, is therefore cross-subsidised by revenues generated in the major centres.

In other words, the geographic distribution of the bulk of Royal Mail's customers mean that large amounts of the service can never be run on a profit basis, as the cost of delivery would be too high.

We say 'no' to privatisation and 'yes' to the Universal Service Obligation. The British National Party oppose Tory and Labour plans to sell off Royal Mail. Privatisation didn't work with the railways - we shouldn't repeat that mistake with Royal Mail. Service to the public should come before profit.

Falling Standards in 47 NHS Trusts

ONE IN nine NHS trusts are performing badly or failing to improve and must "do better for their patients", the NHS regulator has said.

The 47 trusts at the bottom of performance tables published this week now face an uphill struggle to meet new legal standards for the NHS when they are introduced next year, said the Care Quality Commission (CQC).

The ratings are produced by the CQC from a variety of sources including information provided by trusts, their own inspections and audits of hospital finances.

Trusts are given ratings from "weak" to "excellent" based on how they score on their financial management and the quality of care they provide. Next year the CQC will be given tough new powers to force trusts to meet certain basic standards in order to remain open.

If they fail to reach those benchmarks the regulator can impose a range of sanctions including prosecution and closing a service down. Year on year improvements in ratings seem to have stalled according to the new figures.

Fewer trusts scored "excellent" for the quality of their care compared with last year's figures. The drop in ratings was worst among acute hospital trusts with more rated "fair" and fewer "excellent".

More trusts admitted failing to meet core standards on aspects of care like A&E waiting times and more operations were cancelled than last year. Part of the fall in ratings was also down to a more rigorous focus on key issues like hygiene and child protection, said the CQC.

Immigration and the issue of health tourism has put the NHS under huge strain. This fact, coupled with budget cuts, has left the NHS unable to care for the very taxpayers who fund it.

200,000 PAKISTANIS APPLY TO ENTER UK

NEWSPAPERS in Pakistan have claimed that at least 200,000 Pakistani nationals have applied to enter Britain over the past year.

The shocking figure - which cannot be justified in terms of student or any other sort of visa category - was revealed in a new spat between Britain and Pakistan during current talks.

According to media reports, the government of Pakistan plans to formally complain over the delays in processing the visa applications.

The rush of applications - most of them from people claiming to be students - has utterly overwhelmed the UK Border Agency's staff at their new processing hub in Abu Dhabi.

Despite the problem being generated solely by the Pakistanis, the meeting today between Labour's Home Secretary Alan Johnson and Pakistan's president and prime minister is likely to focus on the delay in processing the tidal wave of applications.

Even more disconcerting is that the visa issue threatens to overshadow the real reason for the visit, which is to discuss "counter terrorism" issues.

According to newspapers in Pakistan, "angry visa applicants have complained of long delays, unfair refusals and of being unable to retrieve their passports for up to two months during the application process."

Some of the newspaper reports claimed that there were 200,000 Pakistani passports waiting at the British High Commission in Islamabad. If that claim is true, it means that there are literally millions of Pakistanis queuing up attempting to enter Britain.

Observers have pointed out that if millions of British people decided to swamp Pakistan with "visa" applications, that country's infrastructure would also buckle - never mind the demographic change which such a tidal wave of immigrants would entail.

In fact, it would be no surprise if Pakistan turned down such a large number of applicants on the basis of not wanting so many British people living in Pakistan. This was, after all, the very reason why the Indian subcontinent wanted independence in the first place.

According to an editorial in the daily newspaper, Dawn, entitled "UK visa farce", no "other country ... has such onerous requirement, whereas arguably the potential security threats they have to address are no less severe."

According to British intelligence, more than two-thirds of all terrorist plots in Britain originate in Pakistan.

Ed Balls Blames Grammars for Poor Results

ED BALLS has launched a fresh assault on selective education by holding grammars responsible for failing neighbouring schools.

The Schools Secretary attempted to blame the 11-plus for poor results by secondaries in popular grammar school areas such as Kent and Gloucestershire.

He said this was because the exam makes pupils feel like failures even before they begin their secondary careers.

A spokesman for the National Grammar Schools Association accused Mr Balls of launching 'another sneaky attack' on selective education.

He said: 'If some schools are having problems, it's not the fault of grammar schools. It's the fault of individual schools themselves.'

It isn't grammar schools that are causing the state education system to fail, it is the policies of successive Tory and Labour governments. The lack of discipline and traditional teaching methods in schools have failed pupils and will continue to fail pupils.

MICHAEL BARNBROOK: CORRUPTION BUSTER!

Much has been said, both in the press and on television, regarding the recent Parliamentary expenses scandal.

Praise has been heaped on the Taxpayers Alliance and the Daily Telegraph for exposing the abuse, by some Members of Parliament, of their Parliamentary expenses.

Nothing has been said however, about the individual who set the whole thing in motion.

Why is that? It's because he is a member of the British National Party.

Who are we talking about? None other than Michael Barnbrook, a retired Metropolitan Police Inspector and member of the Bexley Branch of the party.

Michael, who is known as the BNP Sleazebuster, has been reporting Members of Parliament for abuse of their expenses since 2002, when he was first involved in the case of Michael Trend, a Conservative MP, who was forced to stand down from the House of Commons for misappropriating over £90,000 of second home allowance.

Since then Michael has personally been involved in five Members of Parliament having to stand down from the House of Commons and another MP being suspended from the House for a period of time.

Different organisations had been attempting since 2005, by use of the Freedom of Information Act, to force Parliament to publish MPs' expenses, but without success.

It was only after Michael had reported Derek Conway, his local MP, for using his Parliamentary expenses to pay his two sons a salary whilst they were both in full education at university, that the courts finally agreed to the Freedom of Information requests.

The Government were then forced to address the issue of expenses, which resulted in an enquiry being set up under Sir Christopher Kelly, Chairman of the Committee on Standards in Public Life, to carry out a full review of MPs' expenses.

Although the Taxpayers Alliance and the Daily Telegraph are to be congratulated for their work, most of the MPs' who were exposed, have gone unpunished.

Why is this? It is because the authorities who deal with these matters, The Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards and the Metropolitan Police are reactive and not proactive.

This means that they will not consider any allegation without a complaint from a third party.

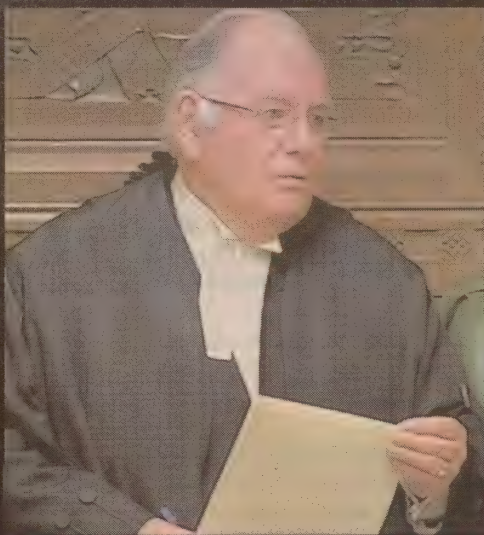

Protocol does not allow the press to lodge complaints and the Parliamentary Commissioner of Standards is not allowed, by the rules of the House, to investigate any allegation on his own initiative.

Individuals, reading in the newspapers that an MP has been exposed and is facing an investigation, are being misinformed, because that is simply not the case.

LEFT: Michael Martin, the former speaker of the House, one of the many politicians he has exposed

It is only when individuals like Michael take the trouble to write to the authorities, setting out why an investigation should take place, that the wheels can be set in motion.

Michael currently has two Lords and eighteen MPs' being considered for investigation and possible prosecution by the Metropolitan Police and the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards.

In order to consider the number of complaints submitted, mainly by Michael, the Metropolitan Police have set up a joint Committee with the Crown Prosecution Service.

Michael is not holding out much hope however that more than three individuals, if any, will be prosecuted, as the Establishment will just not allow that to happen.

Michael was also responsible for Ian Clement, Deputy Mayor of London, being dismissed from the Greater London Assembly, for apparent misuse of a corporate credit card. The Greater London Assembly were forced to refer the matter to the Metropolitan Police for investigation, having initially failed to take appropriate action themselves, after Michael had informed Boris Johnson, the Mayor, that he had written to the Metropolitan Police, requesting a criminal investigation into Mr Clement's use of the card.

Michael's greatest success however, was in helping to bring about the resignation of Michael Martin, Speaker of the House of Commons and third most important person in the country.

This is the first time in over 300 years that the Speaker of the House has been forced to resign.

Mr Martin's downfall was as a direct result of the Derek Conway affair, in addition to Michael reporting Mr Martin to the Parliamentary Commissioner for Standards for apparent misuse of airmiles.

It has been estimated that as many as 150 MPs will stand down at the next General Election as a direct result of the expenses scandal.

Not quite a Watergate, but no mean achievement by the British National Party who started the ball rolling, which hopefully will help to bring down the Communist sympathisers currently running our beloved country

BNP Scotland Continues to Expand

THE BRITISH National Party in Scotland continues to expand and has appointed yet another new organiser and deputy leader, Scottish leader Gary Raikes has announced.

"I am pleased to announce that Joe Finnie will be the new organiser for Renfrewshire and Walter Hamilton will take up the role of Scottish deputy leader," Mr Raikes told a regional meeting of BNP Scotland over the weekend.

"The meeting opened with encouraging reports from Local Authority organisers on the activities which have already taken place in preparation for elections," Mr Raikes told Voice of Freedom.

"I told the meeting about the BNP's ethos of authority and responsibility and why we have to adhere to a disciplined structure if we are to gain success," he said.

"The BNP Scotland is currently at an all-time record with the highest number of active members ever and we are building on our growing vote tallies."

The meeting was given a roundup of articles from the Scottish press which had featured the BNP. These included many front page items which proved how newsworthy the party had become in Scotland. "Even though they were written with a negative slant, they were on average favourable to our cause," Mr Raikes said.

SHROPSHIRE PATRIOTS DINNER

FORTY LOCAL members and supporters attended yet another sell out event in Ludlow as South Shropshire BNP hosted their third 'Shropshire Patriots Dinner' recently.

West Midlands Deputy Regional Organiser James Whittall hosted the event and those gathered were lucky enough to hear speeches from historian Arthur Kemp as well as party Chairman Nick Griffin who arrived as a surprise additional guest with wife Jackie.

After a delightful meal James Whittall opened up proceedings with an appraisal of the local units progress over the past few years which had culminated in their standing three candidates in June's County Council elections. The gathered guests gave a special round of applause to Christina Evans, also the West Midlands Regional Treasurer, who beat Labour into last place in Ludlow East with a very respectable 9% first time out. Christina is also Ludlow's PPC for the British National Party.

James then introduced Nick Griffin MEP who broke news of his impending appearance on the BBC's Question Time to loud cheers from those gathered before recounting tales from his first months in the European Parliament. Nick went on to announce that the British National Party were soon to be launching an online auction of two autographed books by well-known military author Andy McNab to raise funds for the organisation "Help for

"It is a disgrace that there are so many ex-servicemen who are homeless," Mr Griffin told the packed establishment.

"The present government is quite happy to use these young people in their illegal and immoral wars but when they are done, these same young men are cast aside," he said.

Mr Griffin pointed out that it was the BNP in Glasgow who had helped to get the FEBA organisation in Scotland back on its feet with more than £25,000 worth of help after the SNP and Labour had refused to help.

"This news caused hysteria in the leftist Scottish media, but the reality is that British National Party members had once again helped to make a difference where no one else would," he said

The last speaker for the evening was the BNP website content editor and historian Arthur Kemp, who spoke on how the court case brought by the Commission for Equality and Human Rights Commission against the BNP was an own goal.

"This will have no effect whatsoever on the party and the party's goal will remain unchanged," he said.

The dinner proved highly successful with a significant amount of money raised towards next year's election funds. James Whittall announced that the party had already secured the funds for election deposits and a first round of leaflets.

SOUTH WEST REGIONAL TREASURER APPOINTED

THE BRITISH National Party's South West region has appointed its own regional treasurer in accordance with a previously announced plan of devolving the increasingly burdensome role of regional accounting.

This announcement was made at a fund holder training seminar in Somerset last Sunday by regional organiser Mike Howson.

"I am proud to say that the South West now has the services of professional accountant John Savage at its disposal," Mr Howson told the seminar. The South West becomes the second region - after the East Midlands - to appoint its own regional treasurer.

"Mr Savage will oversee our region's finances and will monitor the bookkeeping of all branch fund holders," Mr Howson said.

The seminar, held last Sunday, was conducted by party deputy treasurer David Hannam (left) in the city of Wells.

"Delegates attended from places far and wide such as Bristol, Swindon, Chippenham, Plymouth and Cornwall," Mr Howson said.

"I introduced the session with a talk on the continued rise in support for the party and the increase in funds which that growth necessitated," Mr Howson continued.

"With nearly £1.2 million in donations now being made centrally every year and thousands more being received in the various regions, the bookkeeping of the region's fund holders has become crucial," he said.

Mr Hannam showed how cash control and recording in the petty cash records was important to keeping tabs on the financial aspects of the party.

"This is even more so due to the ever watchful eyes of the sinister dark forces of the Marxist left," Mr Hannam said.

"All branch fund holders will now have access to professional help at all stages," Mr Howson concluded.

CANTERBURY BNP WILL HAVE DISTRIBUTED 250,000 LEAFLETS BY YEAR'S END

THE BRITISH National Party in Canterbury will have distributed more than 250,000 leaflets in the local area before the end of the year, the latest branch meeting in that town was told.

Speaking before a packed meeting this week, Kent Sub-Regional Organiser David Price revealed that the branch activists had already distributed more than 150,000 leaflets since the beginning of the year and were on course to reach the 250,000 goal before year's end.

The incredible achievement is the result of the energy and drive which Mr Price and his highly motivated team of activists have put in, working every second Saturday and odd days at short notice as well.

At the same meeting, Thanet and the East Kent organiser Dennis Whiting revealed that more than 70 people had joined up in the past few months and that the party was financially still firmly in the black despite the heavy demands of the European elections.

The final speaker was Councillor Mark Burke, deputy regional organiser for the South East and parliamentary candidate for Bracknell, who spoke on various matters to do with the recent success in the Euros, the current financial crisis as well as the importance of good relations with the media.

Cllr Burke stressed that whilst national papers often portrayed much the same message as the party on such matters as immigration, it was local papers and radio that had the greatest effect on the public.

"To avoid or isolate ourselves from them was to make the task in hand much much harder," Cllr Burke said.

"All efforts should be made to develop good working relations with the local media. This can be to the advantage of any group and must become a greater priority, especially with local elections in mind," he said.

CAPACITY CROWD WELCOMES NEW WYRE BNP GROUP

A CAPACITY crowd so large that the venue had to be hastily doubled in size gave a rapturous welcome to the formation of the latest British National Party group in Wyre.

"A week of high drama, controversy and protest ended with an absolutely superb capacity meeting of the newly formed Wyre BNP group in the council-owned, Frank Townend Community Centre last night," said Clive Jefferson, North West regional organiser.

"The meeting had been big news locally for two weeks since James Clayton, BNP candidate in a by-election currently being fought in Cleveleys, booked the community centre for the meeting," Mr Jefferson said.

Addressing the meeting, Mr Jefferson went on to pay tribute to Wyre Council chief executive Jim Corry for his principled stand.

"I predict that as we gain acceptance across the North West it is only a matter of time before we have elected officials on most local councils in the region," Mr Jefferson told the meeting.

Speaking afterwards, Mr Clayton said that the "meeting has been a total success. We booked a room y, with a capacity of 40. Luckily, council staff were able to remove a partition which doubled the room size which also was soon full. Some people were turned away because of the lack of space," he said.

"The meeting was one of the best I have ever attended. We sold 300 Voice of Freedom newspapers and residents took away in excess of 2,000 leaflets.

"We had at least nine first time meeting attendees join up on the night, much to the astonishment of the local reporter we allowed in to hear Mr Jefferson speak," Mr Clayton said.

WARRINGTON AND HALTON BNP CAMPAIGN IN WIDNES

THE WARRINGTON and Halton British National Party group held a highly successful day's campaigning in Widnes yesterday, reports organiser Debra Kent.

"We started off with a table on the main street just outside the Green Oaks shopping centre," Miss Kent said.

"We focussed on the Halton area as we polled ten percent of the vote here during the European elections even though we hadn't leafleted or canvassed there at all.

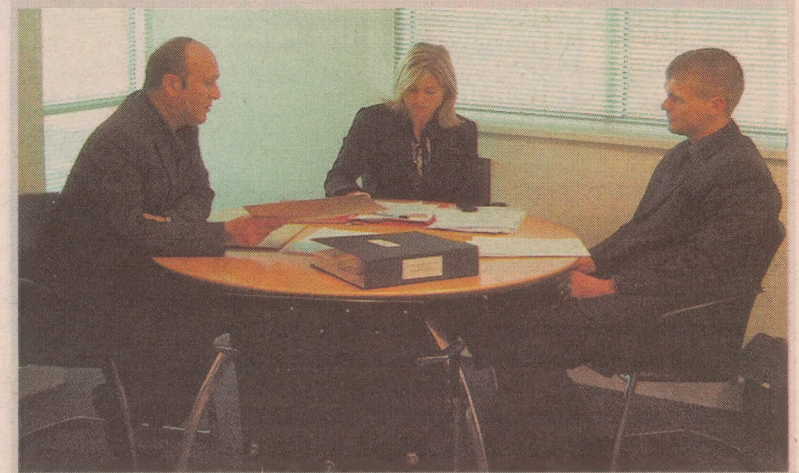

"As we expected, the response was great. Many people donated money or joined up on the spot," she said.

"A member of the public who works at the local hospital reported to us that a memo had been sent round at work forbidding employees to ask for a cup of black coffee because of political correctness. He is going to get the memo for us so that we can publicise the madness to which this country has plummeted," Miss Kent continued.

After the rush at the table was over, the group members split into two groups and leafleted Appleton ward.

"The weather was terrible with wind and rain but we still persevered. I can tell you that when we had completed leafleting the ward, we were glad to seek shelter in a local pub where we celebrated the day's hard work," she concluded.

MEPs OFFICES ARE KEEPING IN TOUCH

CHRIS Beverley and Tina Wingfield held their latest fortnightly meeting at the constituency office in Yorkshire.

Chris and Tina are the Constituency Office Managers for the two British National Party MEPs, Andrew Brons and Nick Griffin, and they meet regularly to exchange ideas and information on the large number of cases that both MEPs are currently dealing with.

"Chris has the experience of four years as a Leeds City councillor so his input on some of my cases has been invaluable," says Tina.

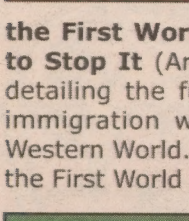

"I have worked in the probation service, as a housing officer and in the fields of mental health and alcohol and drugs rehabilitation, so on these matters I can point our caseworkers in the right direction. These meetings are very useful in keeping each of us up to date with the other's latest cases."

Sitting in on the meeting was the British National Party's Organiser Eddy Butler. He was keen to ensure that the work of the MEPs benefits the Party in showing the public that BNP representatives, at every level of government, get things done for their constituents.

JOURNALISTIC JUSTICE

The newspapers are the self-appointed judge and jury in any cases they perceive to be about morality. Unfortunately their political correctness is at odds with rational thinking, there is also a frightening unanimity in the press.

Morality to them is synonymous with Liberal-Socialist ideals and they believe that they have right on their side. Calmly and with moral smugness they turn a blind eye to the Islamification of The West, then condemn as criminal anyone with the courage to question the wisdom of allowing mass immigration from third world countries. Their whole philosophy seems to be based on a fear of being labelled as racist and they sincerely believe that they are writing the truth, when in reality they are only presenting their own version of the truth. Other positions are just as valid.

Politics is basically about numbers; majorities and power. However in the topsy-turvy world of political correctness minorities are given a disproportionate share of power. A dangerous position to be in when the largest minority is bent on abolishing democracy, and the free press. Immigration is also about numbers, how native populations become minorities. It is naive to believe that we live in some sort of rainbow world where everyone can get along. The dramatic rise in crime, social unrest and terrorism belies this.

EGYPTIAN

I see from page 12 of the Telegraph (12.10.2009), that the BBC say it was inundated with calls after comments on the "Newsbeat" radio programme. (It said 100, some kind of inundation!) The Oxford Dictionary gives the meaning of the word "inundate" as :Flood, Overwhelm, not quite the correct useage of the word I would suggest.

Still when Fiona Bruce states on TV "Me Personally" and tells you that she went to Hertford College, Oxford, it does fill you with dread as to the BBC's "standards"

My brother was born in Egypt to serving RAF personel, does that make him Egyptian? Could he play football for Egypt?

Let me state, I am not and never have been a member of any political party unlike the ex Communist Party members who now serve in this "Labour" government.

Sleep safely in your beds.

MISSING THE POINT

MR BAILEY'S letter "Adapt or Die" (Freedom, # 109) completely misses the point.

The British people, meaning, of course, our own indigenous, ethnically British, people, have never been asked by their government whether they wanted their country to be colonized by mass immigration from the third world, and, more latterly, Eastern Europe.

Every opinion poll conducted on this question over the last fifty years has shown a large majority to have been opposed to mass immigration to this country by non-whites.

Yet the political class, by means of an unholy pact, or understanding, between the three Establishment parties, Lib-Lab-Con, have contrived between them to deny the very real and justified concern of our people a voice in the 'mainstream' media, and the corridors of power.

No more serious issue than mass immigration, with all its concomitant life-changing effects, has existed during the last fifty years, and yet there has never been any suggestion by any of the Establishment parties that our people deserved the right to a referendum on such a crucial question.

If the Establishment believes that using the law (which it has done so much to bring into contempt, and to render worthless) to force the British National Party to accept the ethnically non-indigenous into membership, will destroy or neutralize our party, then it is in for a surprise.

Having lost at the ballot box in June, government hopes it can now win through the law court. This is a mark of its desperation, as the date of the next general election draws ever nearer.

With BNP MPs, and BNP-controlled local authorities, set fair to become a reality in 2010, the writing is on the wall for the old order.

Provided we remain true to our party's founding principles: the future belongs to us.

WAY CLEAR

THE collapse of the Conservative and Independent vote in last month's St Helens Ward by-election in Barnsley leaves the way clear for the British National Party to become the main challenger to Labour in the town.

Across the whole of the Barnsley parliamentary constituency at the European election in June, the BNP captured 16.7% of the total vote.

In St Helens ward, the BNP vote share was 23.2%. This all bodes well for the General Election in May when the BNP will emerge as the second party in Barnsley.

COMMONSENSE DEBATE

FULL marks to Andrew Neil on the Politics Show for bringing a bit of commonsense to the debate on whether Nick Griffin should appear on Question Time.

Barrister Michael Mansfield, the darling of the liberal-left, claimed that a ban on the BNP appearing on the BBC was fully justified.

Now this was the same man who said that the similar ban by the Thatcher Government on Gerry Adams and Sinn Fein was illegal. When Andrew Neil questioned the inconsistency of Mansfield's argument, the barrister bleated:

"Gerry Adams and his organisation didn't point the finger at people and say 'you can't join our party'". The BBC presenter looked gobsmacked. "No they just blew them up," he retorted.

JOIN PEOPLE LIKE YOU IN THE BNP

This is the real face of the British National Party, a family organisation that wants to put British people first. The BNP doesn't 'hate' anyone, we just want to make sure that our own people aren't turned into second class citizens. The British National Party doesn't blame immigrants either - we blame the politicians who have let this country down.

You can join people just like you who want to make a difference. People who feel just the same way about this country and its problems as you do. You'll find that the BNP is made up of people from all walks of life - doctors, teachers, policemen and housewives - united by their love for their country.

There has never been a better time to join up. The British National Party has hundreds of councillors, county councillors, a London Assembly member and two MEPs. The British National Party is a real force in British politics and you can be a part of it!

Make Way for the New Kids on the Block

We are always being told that the reason our country needs the flood of immigrants that have been allowed in to these island is because our population is greying, and that they're here to generate the wealth needed to provide for our pensions; but an article in the Guardian 17th Sept belies this propaganda.

It shows how employment amongst the young has sunk to the lowest level on record whilst among people of pension age that are in work, it has reached an all time high. It also uses graphs with which to dramatically show these trends.

The article juxtaposes two people; the one is Syed Ali, who lost his job with an insurance company and was left homeless when he couldn't afford his rent. The other is Val Bishop, a sixty five year old who is still happily working in B&Q and has no plans to retire.

For Syed Ali, he was fortunate in that the council stepped in and helped him find a flat and then went on to lavish housing benefit on him. He is now training to become a football coach, and has already achieved level one. I have to admit this surprised me as I had no idea there were different levels to football coaching, which has left me wondering whether the ethnic minorities I saw in the park this summer coaching groups of white boys were all working towards their level one. Perhaps this government has hopes that we will kick our way out of this recession.

One can't help getting the impression from this article that it niggles with the left that many of our older white folk are still out there in the workforce, beavering away. They resent the fact that they are not making way for the young immigrants that have been allowed to slip in through our open borders. It is an annoyance to them that many of the immigrants now appear to be surplus to requirements and are a drain on our benefit system while our older folk keep on working and just refuse to go gentle into that good night.

CIVIL SERVANTS NOT ALLOWED TO EAT IN FRONT OF MUSLIMS

THE BRITISH state's subservience to the Islamification process was highlighted once again with an official instruction to Home Office staff not to eat in front of Muslims during the Ramadan fast.

The directive echoes an order issued last year to non-Muslim Tower Hamlets council staff which ordered them to observe the Ramadan fast.

The latest bowing down before the Islamic colonisation process came with a taxpayer-funded Home Office internal memo on how that department's employees should behave during Ramadan.

During this religious holy month, devout Muslims do not drink or eat from dawn until sunset and must avoid "all obscene and irreligious sights and sounds."

The Home Office Islamic Network (HOIN) produced the five-page information sheet which says:

"In practical terms, please be sensitive when eating lunch near a Muslim colleague who is fasting.

"This can make an individual feel hungrier and make it more challenging to observe the fast."

The HOIN also urged managers to be flexible over working arrangements. It says: "The most likely need Muslim staff may present to managers during this period is for flexibility around working hours and break times as those fasting will have a slightly different routine from usual.

"Managers and Muslim staff should discuss what their needs are and be responsive and

Last year, the Muslim-controlled Tower Hamlets council in London issued instructions for council meetings during the Ramadan month to be kept to a minimum and for all non-Muslim councillors to observe the Ramadan fast.

Council leader Lutfur Rahman, who was born in Pakistan, and his deputy, Siraj Islam, sent an e-mail to all councillors outlining arrangements for Town Hall committee meetings during Ramadan.

The e-mail said that all meetings be kept to a minimum to accommodate fasting councillors, and asked all other councillors to resist eating until the breaking of the fast at sunset.

In Manchester, schools will be able to close for Islamic holidays under new plans to "reduce high absence rates."

Almost one in ten of all absence days in the city's schools are noted as religious observance. In an attempt to improve these figures, schools will be allowed to opt to close if 40 percent of pupils are likely to take time off.
